Attention Students - The Future Of Our Freedom Is In Your Hands!

Today's college and high school students are constantly bombarded with misinformation and dangerous myths about guns and gun ownership. Backed by anti-gun politicians and a biased media, those who would deny us of our Second Amendment freedoms focus much of their attention on college and high schools campuses nationwide, hoping to influence you - America's future leaders. As a student concerned about the fate of our Second Amendment rights, you have the power to break the anti-gun hold on America's youth. By bringing the truth surrounding this debate to your campus, you can make sure your fellow students get both sides of the story for a change, and help defend our freedoms for generations to come. It's easy, and you can get started today! Here's how:

- Form an officially recognized registered student organization (RSO). Nothing is more effective than forming your own Second Amendment group right on your campus. Although the specific procedures and policies governing the establishment of student groups vary from campus to campus, generally, submitting a draft charter with a predetermined number of student signatures is all that's required to form an RSO. RSOs are often entitled to office space, use of phones and computers and may also be eligible to receive nominal funding from the school.
- Host & publicize a pro-gun discussion or rally on campus. Depending on the size of the campus, well-publicized rallies can attract audiences from five to 500 participants, and can garner media attention. Your school's facilities department can usually furnish security, public announcement systems, podiums and other materials needed to stage a successful rally.
- Utilize your student newspaper. Want to reach community leaders, faculty members and your fellow students with the pro-gun message? Write a letter to the editor of your school's student newspaper, or provide coverage of local shooting competitions and events. Pro-gun students may even wish to publish their own newsletter as well.

The future of our freedom is in your hands. Will America's next generation of leaders be well informed on our right to keep and bear arms? Or will they fall prey to those whose ultimate goal is to strip us of our liberty? The choice is yours. Make the choice - and make a difference.
